

Campaign Status and Trajectory

Meji Media, 3 September 2026

Where every campaign in the Instantly account stands today, and what happens to each one going into the September corporate launch. All figures pulled live from the account on 3 September 2026.

Where everything stands

| Campaign                       | Loaded        | Emailed | Never emailed | Still in sequence | Sends from    |
|--------------------------------|---------------|---------|---------------|-------------------|---------------|
| Corporate: Decision-Makers (A) | 589           | 589     | 0             | 0                 | mejievent.com |
| Corporate: Organisers (B)      | 434           | 431     | 3             | 17                | mejievent.com |
| Corporate: Big Companies in UK | 880           | 622     | 258           | 9                 | mejievent.com |
| Corporate: Named accounts (C)  | Not built yet |         |               |                   |               |
| Christmas: Warm Re-engagement  | 907           | 906     | 1             | 0                 | mejimedia.com |
| Christmas: Bookers             | 983           | 982     | 1             | 2                 | mejimedia.co  |
| Christmas: Cold, three cities  | 569           | 569     | 0             | 0                 | mejixmas.com  |

Three further campaigns run under MejiAI and Banter on separate mailboxes. They sit outside this engagement and nothing here affects them.

Every list this engagement covers has been worked through. The one untouched audience of any size is the 258 people loaded into Big Companies in UK and never emailed; beyond them, five stragglers are visible in the table (3 in Organisers, 1 each in Warm Re-engagement and Bookers).

What happens to each

The corporate campaigns get rebuilt, not restarted. All of them hold two-email sequences written before the 29 July approval. The pack signed off then is three versions at three touches each: Version A to decision-makers, Version B to organisers, Version C to named accounts. Version C has no campaign at all yet. So the launch builds three fresh sequences from the approved copy and retires the old ones.

Big Companies in UK needs a decision. It sits on the same three mejievent mailboxes the September push will use, and it is stopped rather than finished. Of the 880 loaded, 622 have been emailed and 258 never were; 9 of the emailed group sit frozen mid-sequence where the campaign stopped. The campaign predates my involvement, so the reason it stopped is not known here.

Three ways forward: finish it on its existing copy, retire it, or fold the 258 into the new push under the approved copy. The third is the recommendation, provided the addresses are re-verified first, since they have been sitting unused for some time and stale addresses damage sender reputation.

The Christmas lists are spent. Warm Re-engagement, Bookers and Cold hold two uncontacted people between them out of 2,459 loaded. Two of the three still show as active in the account, but with almost nothing left to send they are finished in practice. It matters only because September and October are when enquiries actually peak, so no outbound Christmas activity is running through the two busiest months. That is a separate conversation once corporate is away.

What September can carry

The corporate push sends from three mejievent mailboxes at 30 emails a day each, so 90 a day in total. At three touches per person, that supports about 30 new people a sending day. Over a full month of roughly 22 sending days that is about 650 new contacts, against the 1,500 to 2,000 a month the September plan was built around; with a launch in the second week of September, this month lands nearer 450 to 500.

The constraint is the mailboxes, not the audience. The Apollo universe matching the brief is around 41,000 contacts UK-wide, of which roughly 17,000 survive the filtering run before loading.

A second sending domain carrying three more mailboxes doubles the ceiling. New domains need three to four weeks of warm-up before they can carry real volume, so one started this week comes into service late September to the first week of October, depending on how the warm-up goes.

|                        | Now       | With the second domain (early October) |
|------------------------|-----------|----------------------------------------|
| Sending mailboxes      | 3         | 6                                      |
| Emails per day         | 90        | 180                                    |
| New contacts per month | About 650 | About 1,300                            |

Both columns are full-month run rates at roughly 22 sending days a month.

September therefore runs on the current three mailboxes. The reply rate still answers whether the awards angle lands, which is what the month was set up to test, but the number of conversations will be modest and the read comes off a smaller sample than planned.

One item already in hand

mejievent.com's email authentication is set to monitor-only, which is weaker than it should be for the domain carrying the corporate volume. Tightening it sits on our side: the first step happens before anything sends, and it goes to full strength over the month as the reports stay clean.
