Where everything stands

Campaign	Loaded	Emailed	Never emailed	Still in sequence	Sends from
Corporate: Decision-Makers (A)	589	589	0	0	mejievent.com
Corporate: Organisers (B)	434	431	3	17	mejievent.com
Corporate: Big Companies in UK	880	622	258	9	mejievent.com
Corporate: Named accounts (C)	Not built yet
Christmas: Warm Re-engagement	907	906	1	0	mejimedia.com
Christmas: Bookers	983	982	1	2	mejimedia.co
Christmas: Cold, three cities	569	569	0	0	mejixmas.com

Three further campaigns run under MejiAI and Banter on separate mailboxes; they sit outside this engagement and nothing here touches them. Every list this engagement covers has been worked through: the one untouched audience of any size is the 258 in Big Companies in UK, plus five stragglers visible in the table.

The plan: three new campaigns, one fresh list

The push does not restart the old campaigns. They hold two-email sequences written before the copy you approved on 29 July; what you approved is three versions at three touches each. So three new campaigns get built from it:

New campaign	Audience	Copy	List
1. Decision-makers	HR Director, Head of People, Head of Events and similar (11 titles)	Version A, 3 touches	Fresh pull at launch
2. Organisers	Office Manager, EA, PA to the Board, HR Manager and similar (6 titles)	Version B, 3 touches	Fresh pull at launch
3. Named accounts	The hand-picked company list, confirmed with you at load	Version C, 3 touches	Your list

The target audience is the July brief, unchanged: UK-wide, 50 to 2,000 staff, 17 event-buying sectors. Roughly 41,000 people match; about 17,000 survive the filters. The list is pulled at launch so the data is freshest, which is also when your Apollo credits get spent. New contacts only: every batch passes five checks before loading (off-target names out, your past customers out, anyone ever emailed in any campaign out, risky mail gateways out, then address verification).

The old Decision-Makers and Organisers campaigns retire in place as history and are never reactivated. Big Companies in UK is your call: finish it on its old copy (not recommended), retire it, or fold it, meaning the 258 never-emailed get re-verified and routed by job title into new campaign 1 or 2. The 9 frozen mid-sequence and the 594 already worked stay archived on every path. The campaign predates my involvement, so the reason it stopped is not known here.

The Christmas lists send nothing this cycle: Warm Re-engagement, Bookers and Cold hold two uncontacted people between them out of 2,459 loaded, so they are finished in practice even though two still show as active in the account. Any new Christmas outbound would need fresh lists and is a separate conversation.

What September can carry

The push sends from three mejievent mailboxes at 30 emails a day each, 90 in total. At three touches per person that supports about 30 new people a sending day: roughly 650 across a full month of 22 sending days, and nearer 450 to 500 with a launch in the second week of September, against the 1,500 to 2,000 a month the September plan was built around. The ceiling is the mailboxes, not the list.

A second sending domain with three more mailboxes doubles the ceiling. New domains need three to four weeks of warm-up, so one started this week comes into service late September to the first week of October, depending on how the warm-up goes; its mailboxes fold into campaigns 1 and 2 once warm.

	Now	With the second domain (early October)
Sending mailboxes	3	6
Emails per day	90	180
New contacts per month	About 650	About 1,300

Both columns are full-month run rates at roughly 22 sending days a month.

Order of work at the go

Authentication first step (mejievent.com is still on monitor-only; it steps to full strength over the month as the reports stay clean), build the three campaigns with stop-on-reply and bounce protection on, pull and filter the list, test send into your inboxes to check placement, load, final check, start. Two to three days once the test inboxes are in.
